Unfazed by fall’s raw
and burnt sienna gouache:
willow’s green fountain.

Mud puddle: pond scum,
half-submerged leaves, pigeon tracks,
wobbling skyscrapers.

A gale cleaves trees, boughs.
Two long-tailed claims adjustors
pick through the wreckage.

Bare circuitry of oak, elm. How long before the maple blows a fuse?

So cold the muzzled Doberman's nostrils smoke. The locust’s harrowed bark.

A warm front melts the hoarfrost on the tennis courts –
autumn’s backhand smash.
Beside the lake, a
tossed pop-stick crawling with ants;
Manhattan Island.
